Providing and Billing Medicare for Remote Patient Monitoring

Webinar# T5080

DATE AND TIME

August 14, 2018
12:30 - 1:30 p.m. CT

OVERVIEW

Beginning in 2018, Medicare Part B pays for remote patient monitoring (RPM). With new technologies that can collect and transmit patient data, RPM is a means by which to manage high-cost, high-risk patients, thus avoiding readmissions and emergency room visits. By leveraging this new Medicare reimbursement, providers can expand their capabilities for value-based care.

Martie Ross will provide an overview to help attendees better understand Medicare billing rules for RPM, as well as teach them how to launch an effective and compliant program within their organization.

TARGET

This session is recommended for chief innovation officers, chief information officers, chief medical officers, compliance officers, directors of ambulatory care, physicians, nurses, clinic managers, clinic administrators, coding, billing and claims personnel, clinical service staff, chargemaster coordinators, financial analysts, non-physician practitioners, healthcare auditors and other interested personnel.

OBJECTIVES

1. Define factors contributing to the current, nationwide opioid crisis.
2. Discuss the importance of the Prescription Drug Monitoring Program (POMP).
3. Apply current best practice when educating patients on the risks of opioids.
4. Devise and implement strategies that promote the prevention of opioid abuse.

FACULTY

Martie Ross, Principal
Pershing Yoakley & Associates

Martie Ross serves as a trusted advisor to providers navigating the ever-expanding maze of healthcare regulations. Her deep and wide understanding of value-based payment and delivery models is an invaluable resource for providers seeking to strategically position their organizations for the future. Previously, she had a successful two-decade career as a healthcare transactional and regulatory attorney.

Ms. Ross has an uncanny ability to synthesize complex regulatory schemes and explain in practical terms their impact on providers and payers. She is a recognized thought leader, having authored numerous articles and white papers on a broad-range of topics, including new payment and delivery models, healthcare innovation, population health management, and regulatory compliance issues. Ms. Ross has no real or perceived conflicts of interest that relate to this presentation.
