Managing Performance Reactions Activity
15-20 minutes

Situation #1

Manager: You have to give Joe his annual performance review. Last year's overall score was a 4.5 and this year the rating was 3.3.

After this news is delivered.....

Employee's Reaction: Joe explodes in anger. He claims that this year's work was as good or better than in the past and that your rating is purely arbitrary and meaningless.

Manager's Response: ????

Situation #2

Manager: You have to give Anne her performance review. The overall rating was a 2.8. Some serious negative issues regarding teamwork were discussed. You view teamwork as critical to success of the employee's projects.

After the news is delivered....

Employee's Reaction: Anne refuses to accept the criticism and claims that you cannot judge teamwork since you are not based in the same city and are never with them.

Manager's Response: ????

Situation #3

Manager: Manager: You have to give Tony his performance review. Her overall score was a 3.0. Her performance for the year was erratic, with either exceptional or mediocre results on the project.

After the news is delivered....

Employee's Reaction: Tony points out that she was singled out for recognition several times during the year, including being mentioned at an "all hands" meeting. How could this possibly be a 3.0 rating?

Manager's Response: ????

Situation #4

Manager: Manager: You have to give Robin her performance review and there were some significant areas that needed improvement.

After the news is delivered....

Employee's Reaction: Robin refused to discuss the review any further and refuses to sign the review, stating that the ratings were unfair and just wrong.

Manager's Response: ????

Situation #5

Manager: You have to give Ben his performance review. The rating was somewhat low due to a number of projects that were not completed on time.

After the news is delivered....

Employee's Reaction: Ben states that the projects were delivered late due to factors that he could not control, and it is unfair to reduce his merit increase because of this.

Manager's Response: ????

Situation #6

Manager: You have to give April her performance review.
Some areas of improvement were raised.

After the news is delivered....

Employee's Reaction: April gets up and walks out of the room without saying a word.

Manager's Response: ????

Situation #7

Manager: You have to give Ron his performance review. The overall rating was a 2.6. This is the first time that this employee has received a rating of less than a satisfactory rating.

After the news is delivered....

Employee's Reaction: Ron provides only 1 word responses and refuses to discuss the issues raised. He seems somewhat indifferent to the review.

Manager's Response: ????

Situation #8

Manager: You have to give Kim her performance review and there were some significant areas that needed improvement.

After the news is delivered....

Employee's Reaction: Kim accuses you of playing favorites and further states that she believes that her performance is equal to or better than some of her peers.

Manager's Response: ????

Situation #9

Manager: You have to give Rob his performance review and there are both positive and negative items to discuss.

After the news is delivered....

Employee's Reaction: Rob burst into tears during the discussion of the negative items.

Manager's Response: ????

Situation #10

Manager: You have to give Laura her performance review and there are both positive and negative items to discuss.

After the news is delivered....

Employee's Reaction: Laura is very quick to agree with all of your stated points.

Manager's Response: ????

Situation #11

Manager: You have to give Mike his performance review and the rating was a 3.6.

After the news is delivered....

Employee's Reaction: Mike is angry and states that he feels that his performance for the year was outstanding. He says that the goals were unreachable and that he contributed far more than anyone else on his team.

Manager's Response: ????

Situation #12

Manager: You have to give Michelle her performance review and there were some significant areas that needed improvement.

After the news is delivered....

Employee's Reaction: Michelle states that the reason for the low performance was your poor management and lack of leadership skills.

Manager's Response: ????
